GOSSIP OF RING AND FIELD.

American and French Plays to Be Produced This Fall.

BEEZY GOSPI OF A SUMMER DAY ON THE BALTO.

THREE FESTIVE MILLS TO BE DECIDED AT CONEY ISLAND TO-NIGHT.

It is said that the deal between McKee and Louis Almire, by which the latter was to play the leading part in the former's play "The Kentucky Colonel," has been through Fred Bryant—of "Forgiven's" renown—is to interpret the part of the girl who wins the girl. The play, as already explained, has three excellent roles. "The Kentucky Colonel" is to be acted at the Union Square Theatre Aug. 22, and it is to be presented in a very conscientious way. Mr. Rankin has a character part, the opportunities of which are said to be great.

Jeffrey Lewis, once very well known, has become tragically eccentric again. She is now playing on stage—mainly in San Francisco—but is making a bad production of "The Devil in the Sash" play that has lain dormant so long as far as this country is concerned. The late Lillian Gish produced it, and died her death, for some reason or other, that has never been touched, except by Sarah in the original French. Jeffrey Lewis has a new play by Mrs. W. H. Bancroft, called "Woman's Eyes," and another sordid piece entitled ".

Sarah G. Lewis is resting from her European tour in the White Mountains. Her rehearsals begin next Monday.

J. M. Hill is negotiating with French of the Metropolitan Opera-House ballet. It is the manager's intention to introduce a ballet, the third act of his forthcoming production of "The Sleeping-Master."

Augusta Italy has given away his plans to favored California. From this favored California it is learned that Mr. Italy will pass the season play four months in London, and four in New York, and six weeks in the big Eastern cities. It is also said that it is extremely unlikely that Italy will ever return to his company again to San Francisco, as he can put in his time so much more profitably elsewhere. San Francisco has of late won a good deal of managerial disapproval. Getting there is expensive and business must be very large indeed in order to yield an adequate profit.

E. E. Rice says that the burlesque "Lulu" is to be put through the country this season in will probably in about four weeks, either in New York or in Boston.

Most poor Spanish dancing Granadina; she is ill and unable to appear on the roof garden, and the season is not yet over. It was thought that the troupe had been given a free hand and daily constitution; it was not that evil news from the orange groves of her native Seville made her ill, but the heat of the sun beat her to it; it was not woman's courage that prompted her to rudely absent herself; nor was there any remedy for it.

There was, in fact, nothing of this. To travel and practice—Granadina had eaten a dish of beans and they had disagreed with her.

"A Temperance Town" will probably have been run in Boston. The energetic Hoyt is going to try to make the play in Boston what "Truth to Chinatown" was here in New York.

Young Lloyd, the well-known English comedian, who was a showman and destined to go to England on the Servia at the close of his engagement here. There was to be a concert on board and Mr. Lloyd had graciously invited the manager of the Servia to be present. The young man begged the artist to sing. He was very persistent, and set he would open a bottle with Lloyd if he did not sing. The young man was certainly a trifle mischievous—and declined to sing at all. Subsequently, at the concert, he was among those who did not sing.

Mr. Klein, author of "By Proxy," Alfred Klein, of the Walt Hopper's company; Vernon Jarrett, Robert Mantell and Roland Macdonald arrived here on the Umbria Saturday.

When Harry Lee prepared to leave the Fourteenth Street Theatre Saturday, after a rehearsal of "The White Slave," he discovered that he had lost his hat, with which his straw hat and left a very ugly one behind. The straw hat was very large, awkward, and very unattractive, but it did not detract from the young man's good looks. Harry Lee, the young man, was granted a group of admirers.

"Hello, Lee," said one who was the first to approach him, "you have got a small for your hat?" "Oh!" replied Lee, humbly, "you forgot that I have but recently concluded a starting engagement in London."

On the Const. [From Judge.] Whale—Hello, Sharkey! How have you been?

Shark—Not very well. I've had trouble with my teeth.

Lee—You ought to have been here in case there were several visitors to the show. There were several ones. One pair belonging to a Chicago drummer would have liked you to perfection.

MRS. ULMER'S PLOT.

Past Love Used as a Tool to Extort Money.

Miss Samantha Arnott was going to be married. It made quite a sensation among the bachelors—who had long looked upon her in the light of a convenient necessity when Mr. Bruce announced their engagement, though to be sure it was in many respects a very suitable match.

The two were both young, good-looking and honest in love with each other, but Sammie was poor and worked like a slave to save her mother servant hire, while Harry Ulmer was the fortunate possessor of $10,000. He was perfectly sure, however, that his money was no object with Sammie and that he loved him for himself alone.

She was so sweet! so pretty! Such a good, loving, helpful daughter that he felt his heart warm towards her every time he caught sight of her pink cheeks and blue eyes.

He insisted that Mrs. Arnott should like a strong capable woman, so that Sammie could have leisure to go about writing.

Then he took her everywhere, loaded her with presents and flattered her to such an extent that, if she had not been one of the most sensible little women in the world, her head would have been completely turned. As it was she took an innocent delight in this surprisingly long holiday, the new and pleasant companion ship.

Matters might have gone on thus indefinitely had not an unexpected event occurred. Nothing more nor less than the advent of a new bachelorette. Not only was she a strikingly handsome woman, but she was also an old friend of Mr. Bruce's. There was, moreover, a certain particle of their acquaintance—a pale, early painful character, so painful, indeed, that he had never mentioned to Sammie that period of his life in which she was concerned. He would have accepted an introduction to her, ignoring any former meeting, but she made such a course impossible by a very impressive gesture of welcome.

Her smile, however, could not help being in the affair. She could not help blushing Harry a little, and, much to his surprise, grew at times quite stampish with him.

At first the idea that Sammie might be jealous struck him in the light of a huge joke. Afterwards, as a dim, masculine perception of the older woman's attractions and fascinations dawned upon him, he took himself sharply to task. He knew his little, honest, true-hearted love to be worth a dozen accomplished flirtations like Mrs. Ulmer, and so one day, when he caught her quite alone, he told her the true story of his former acquaintance with the lady.

"It was years ago," said he, "I was a young fellow, headstrong and romantic. Sammie was pretty and in no end of trouble, all on account of being mixed up with an ugly piece of scoundrel. The women would not look at her and the men hardly dared to."

"I began by pitying her; I ended by falling in love and offering to marry her."

"She accepted me gladly enough, and for a few weeks I lived in a fool's paradise, then, the very day before we were to have been married, she left me and ran away with Bert Ulmer."

"He was a bad lot and led her a hard life, I have heard. I rather think she is taking more comfort as a widow than she ever did as a wife. I cannot help feeling a bit ashamed when I see what a difference Uncle Hall's money makes. With all I did not receive even for doing and earning courtesy, without it worth cultivating."

"So I perceive," said Sammie, with much asperity, then, with a smile on only lighting her sweet, malignant face. "Was that what you meant when you said that she does do in a great favor?"

"It was. I would have told you before, but I was ashamed of the whole affair, and I did not know how the idea that I ever wanted another wife would strike you."

"Mrs. Ulmer," said Lee, "this is my extract—she is to be married soon and anybody in the house can give you all the
